

Matter of fact

LAST week in "Terror talks tough" we reported that a surveillance operation had been launched to spy on Mosiuoa Lekota and other ANC rebels. Our source was a national intelligence operative, but we did not state that the NIA was involved in the surveillance. The Democratic Alliance incorrectly interpreted the report to mean that this was the case.

NIA spokesman Lorna Daniels has since pointed out that, although the agency was prohibited from confirming operations, only individuals engaged in unlawful activity that has an impact on national security received the agency's attention.
